beautiful green spaces right in the heart of the capital where you can escape the hustle and bustle of the city. They're a place for you to relax and unwind, exercise and clear your mind. If it's history and architecture you're after, we have hundreds of buildings, statues and memorials, giving a fascinating insight memorials</h2>

The Royal Parks cares for a large number of statues and memorials which mark historical figures and events. All of these are on public display in our parks and open spaces. We believe that we should provide fair and balanced information about the individuals and events that are being commemorated and set out the context in which the memorials were erected. Given the understandable concern about memorials, particularly those that are considered to celebrate figures who supported and profited from slavery, we will be undertaking a review of the major memorials in our care. This will include looking at the interpretation and information we provide to ensure that we do not provide a sanitised or one-sided view of history. Our organisation seeks to support equality, diversity and inclusion in all of its work and continues to do all it can to achieve this.--->

The White Tower was begun in the reign of William the Conqueror (1066-87) and completed by 1100. The fortress was originally faced with huge blocks of pale marble-like Caen stone imported from Normandy. In 1636-8 the external appearance of the White Tower was significantly altered with the replacement of much of its cut-stone work and window surrounds with Portland stone.

The primary role of the White Tower was as a fortress and stronghold but it also served as a royal residence and as the setting for major governmental and <h2 id="what-is-vetting">What is vetting?</h2>

Vetting helps employers and employees identify, manage and mitigate risks for roles
where national security concerns are a consideration, like jobs with access to high risk sites, highly classified information or systems. Vetting establishes trust between employers and employees, sometimes through confidential conversations. It is the start of an ongoing dialogue about managing risks, which lasts for as long as a person holds a security clearance.

<h2 id="who-delivers-vetting">Who delivers vetting?</h2>

Vetting is delivered by United Kingdom Security Vetting (<abbr title="United Kingdom Security Vetting">UKSV</abbr>), which is part of the Cabinet Office Government Security Group and the Government Security Function.
Our staff are culturally sensitive and professional. You can find out more about <abbr title="United Kingdom Security Vetting">UKSV</abbr> and how to join us

<h2 id="what-information-will-i-be-asked-for">What information will I be asked for?</h2>

```html
We want to ensure that anyone, irrespective of their background or circumstance feels able to apply for a security related role and a clearance. Be assured that information will be gathered in a proportionate, respectful and sensitive way. If you are required to complete a Security Questionnaire, you will need to provide information about your background, family, employment history and where you’ve lived. We need to ask about any criminal convictions, and for higher levels of clearance your financial situation and life experiences to help us understand you as an individual.

<h2 id="why-will-i-be-asked-for-this-information">Why will I be asked for this information?</h2>

We only ask for information that helps us to identify areas of risk in relation to the clearance you are applying for - there are no right or wrong answers and the process will not make any judgements of you as an individual or your life.
Depending on the level of clearance your role requires, in no particular order, we may need to understand:

<ul>
  <li>
    Your nationality and any periods of residence or connections overseas, especially in countries that the UK has more challenging relationships with, but mindful that relatively few posts are reserved to UK nationals these days. </li>
  <li>
    Whether your spending is sustainable, mindful that most of us have debts and credit agreements to manage. </li>
  <li>
    Your mental and physical wellness, but only so far as it is strictly relevant to risk management - it is very unusual for any health considerations to be a cause for concern. </li>
  <li>
    In the strictest confidence, any aspects of your life or identity that you keep private, but only to understand if there is a risk of somebody using this against you maliciously.
  </li>
  <li>
    How you manage family connections, associations and friendships, including
who might have a significant influence on you, but only to understand if there is a risk of this influence being inappropriate. </li>
  <li>
    For civil and crown servants, whether any information you post online publicly is consistent with the civil service code and similar guidance, mindful that most people have a significant social media footprint. </li>

</ul>

We will only ask and explore what is reasonable and relevant from a security perspective. We will frame and explain our questions to demonstrate that.
